Ontario hoist is a busy place these days, says the Park City Miner. A force of carpenters, machinists and teamsters are at work rushing the hoist to completition. Most of the frame-work of the building is up, and it will all be enclosed in a couple of weeks. Wednesday night at 9 o'clock the water was baled out to the station at the 1,700-foot level, the big buckets taken out and the cages put in place. Next day a force of men was put to work and that afternoon the work of hoisting the ore was begun. The 400 ton bin, at the 600-foot level, will be filled and the mill will be started u The old employes are being put on a rapidly as men are needed. It was found that the tunnels and drifts in which the water had been standing for the past two months have not been so riously damaged.

Lafayette Holbrook, president of the Grand Central company, was up from Provo yesterday morning on mining business. He stated that the shaft at the Grand Central had just about reached the 1.200-foot level and that an average of four feet a day was being made.

At the 1.200-foot mark room enough will be made to start drifting at that point, but sinking will be kept up.
